What's New in the?

This is why the daily double In 2015, Ahmed Khayal is from Newcastle, Egypt and the second of his family to study medicine. His family moved to Newcastle in Australia when his father was 18 years old. He was interviewed in the summer of last year by medical school admissions officers at Newcastle University. "They were very impressed with me," Mr Khayal said. "The interview was mainly quizzing me about the day-to-day routine. I was asked to give them an insight into that and they were really pleased with what I had to say." He believes that being able to follow his dreams is something that he has been blessed with. "It is something I have been able to inherit from my family," he said. "It was something I had in mind while growing up and it is something that I have always had since I was able to start saying things." His parents are proud of him. "I want to follow in their footsteps," he said. "My parents have really encouraged me. I want to help people. I know it will be great to do a career where you help people and where you have the opportunity to make a positive impact." Mr Khayal is based at the City Hospital in Newcastle. Some of his previous work has included GP surgeries, operating theatres, as well as a community health service to provide access to blood tests and potentially save lives. "I enjoy my work and I think that it is really rewarding," he said. "I treat people, to help them live a longer, happier, healthier life." He enjoys working in the emergency department because it gives him the opportunity to see people from different walks of life. "It gives me a chance to give blood," he said. "I enjoy helping people and it is a chance to be of assistance to them. I've also given blood at a community health centre and blood donation clinics." "I enjoy helping people and it is a chance to be of assistance to them. I've also given blood at a community health centre and blood donation clinics." Mr Khayal has enjoyed meeting people from different walks of life. "I have really enjoyed it," he said. "It is something I have wanted to do since I was a child and I would look at my parents going out and work. They are so dedicated and loving and I have thought that would be a good thing to help
