For example, you may be aware of the importance of expressing love in words and actions, but you have never truly experienced love at first sight. Or perhaps, love is not on the top of your list. Loving and being loved is one of the most meaningful experiences on earth. No doubt about that! But knowing about it and experiencing it are two very different things. As the world's population grows, people are becoming more mobile and spending less time in communities. Because of the distance between people, marriage has become a big deal. Our ability to accept this and truly experience love is no longer just for those who live in an urban setting. The distance and modern technology that allow the world to come together have allowed most to experience some form of love as a "remote marriage". Certainly, not all marriages are successful. In fact, many marriages break apart, more often than not, after the first year. Others struggle and find their way to a lasting relationship. It is not unusual for people to be amazed at what a marriage is and how it was built. Marital bliss is the term used to describe the positive emotions, experiences, and positive emotions, experiences, and effects of marital love. According to William Doherty, author of the book Spiritual Abstinence for Married People, people who follow the Christian faith are frequently asked what it means to live in a spiritual marriage. In his book, he describes "marriage of the spirit" in the following words: "Marriage of the spirit is the true marriage that Christ envisioned for his disciples. Marital union that rests on complete self-giving. Spouses who look at each other, have each other's best interests at heart, are concerned about each other, are genuinely happy to be together, are compatible, and are able to be servants to each other. Marriage of the spirit is not a recipe for self-gratification. Marital self-giving does not put the needs of others second to the needs of the couple. Marriage of the spirit is not just about the spiritual relationship between husband and wife. The Holy Spirit is a person, and the love that Christ gives for his bride, the Church, is reflected in the love that husbands and wives give each other. A marriage of the spirit is built on the spiritual foundation
