While defining a user interface in java, I always "soft" indicate the use of caps so that users may enter their email addresses or passwords in whatever way they want. But, how to enforce them to use caps? A: Nothing's going to stop a user from putting his/her password in small caps (by touching a tiny bit of the 'wrong' spot on the keyboard)... As a quick and dirty solution, you could use a number of javascript events (change, input, keydown, keypress) that trigger an alert when a non-capitalized character is detected (my golly, where can I find a good regexp of "non-capitalized" characters? :)). [Telescopic endoscopic surgery (varicocele surgery): How much is the real advantage?]. The TESE is an interesting technique to treat varicocele but, which is the real advantage of TESE versus REV: does it change the cure rate in adolescent patients?. We have compare the results of TESE versus REV in adolescent patients affected with varicocele. We have used two groups of patients: group 1 (N.=11): 11 adolescents undergoing TESE and group 2 (N.=10): 10 adolescents undergoing REV. The mean age was 15.6 years in group 1 and 15.3 years in group 2. All patients underwent diagnosis for varicocele (ultrasonography and color doppler) and the definitive treatment (TESE and REV) was decided on the basis of the infertility syndrome and size and number of veins and grade of varicocele. During TESE we have done only multiple spermatic vein embolization in order to facilitate the dissection of the spermatic cord. During TESE after

P: Steinwijkweg 4..Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to graphical user interfaces for computer systems. More specifically, the present invention relates to a system and method of collapsing and expanding overlapping windows on a display screen. Description of the Related Art There are many applications that use a graphical user interface to provide a user with an intuitive way to view and manipulate data. Many applications, however, require that the user must actively select and manipulate each item within a group or list of items. For example, a user navigating through a collection of maps must manually select each map in order to pan and zoom the map. In addition, there are many computer applications that produce a list of objects in a specified area. For example, certain gaming software may produce a list of all weapons or monsters located within a map. This list may be quite long, so it may be displayed in a single list. A single list may not be large enough to fill the entire display, however, and in this case the list may be displayed in a scrollable window. Many times, however, a user only wishes to view the items in the list. Each item on the list would have to be manually selected and collapsed to allow the user to view only the selected item. If multiple items are selected, the list would have to be expanded to show the entire list. A number of methods have been implemented to allow computer users to view and manipulate lists of objects, and to automatically display objects in a list view. In one method, the Canada is top producer of conventional oil in North America By Mark Gallman, Environmental Reporter Updated: Feb 6, 2015 7:34 AM Canada has surpassed Saudi Arabia as the number one producer of conventional oil and natural gas in North America, according to data released by the US Energy Information Administration (EIA). The US EIA said Canada produced 5.0 million barrels of conventional oil per day in 2014. That compared with 4.1 million barrels per day in Saudi Arabia, and was ahead of Venezuela and the United States. Conventional oil is that which is extracted from a single reservoir. Canada's total production capacity is estimated at 3.6 million barrels per day, and its total proven reserves are at 78.4 billion barrels. For natural gas, Canada's capacity is estimated at 3.4 trillion cubic feet per day, and its proven reserves at 100.7 trillion cubic feet. In 2014, Canada produced 46.6 percent of all conventional oil produced in the United States, 8.4 percent of conventional oil produced in the rest of North America, and 7.2 percent of conventional oil produced in the world. It was the 12th largest producer of conventional oil in the world, with the fourth largest reserves. The EIA cautioned that the production data used in the report does not consider unconventional production. The most important recent report on North American unconventional production looked at data for 2013. In a report published on January 29, the US EIA said that Canada
